In August, Danske Invest Hedge Fixed Income Global Value Fund, Class C-sek h p provided a return of 0.7%. Year to date the return is 9.66%

August was characterised by unusually high volatility in the European Fixed Income Markets. Sentiment was weak fuelled by concerns related to global growth, Brexit and trade war.

Thin summer liquidity probably added to very volatile interest rate markets in August. 30Y EUR interest rate swaps decreased around 50bp intra month pushing the entire EUR interest rate swap curve to negative territory at one point. The very large moves had a small negative impact on this month's performance.

However, the large moves also created opportunities, which we used to enter new positions.

Activity in the EUR fixed income market is traditionally very low in August with almost no new issuance. Looking ahead, activity will pick up September potentially creating interesting opportunities

At the end of August the portfolio risk level (in terms of Value-at-Risk) is approx. 55% below our maximum risk limit, which is roughly unchanged compared to last month.
